A: You just need to add the top-level element. This will not change the margins for later pages. As for your original question - you have a text box which will go beyond the right border of the page. The text box has only 1 line, and its bottom is being pushed beyond the bottom of the page. You can add another text box which will expand to fill the right column, or you can just extend the height of the text box to match the page height.

PARIS (Reuters) - Hundreds of thousands of people took to the streets across France on Saturday in the third weekend of "yellow vest" protests against President Emmanuel Macron's policies, and in the first major round of mass demonstrations since a state of emergency was declared. The protests were small and largely dispersed by the time the end of the evening rush hour neared, with just a few isolated clashes reported by security forces. The protests were initially triggered by planned fuel tax hikes that have spiraled into broader anger over Macron's perceived disdain for ordinary French people. The number of protesters nationwide was unclear on Saturday, though police in Paris and other cities estimated a turnout of some 200,000 to 300,000. By midday, after round one of protests, figures from the Interior Ministry showed that 67,000 people had demonstrated in Paris alone while the number in other cities was lower, about 40,000. In other major cities, including Toulouse, Rouen, Nantes and Lyon, organizers said they had gathered between a few hundred to a few thousand people. In Paris, the number of protesters in the evening was lower than at similar gatherings on Jan. 14 and 15. That three-day protest began with several hundred thousand people and eventually drew around 800,000. While the movement has drawn support from many who feel neglected by Macron's reforms and believe that the state no longer protects them, it has also been characterized by some as a conspiracy by the
