I was trying to think of a way to describe a scene at church yesterday that made me laugh and have a double take in my head. A few weeks ago, our new interim pastor, Jess Lyle, had his first sermon at our church. He preached a sermon called, "Dangerous Conversations". During the service, he talked about what is a dangerous conversation and how it can be dangerous to the people involved. He said a dangerous conversation may start off with one person's idea or opinion, then the conversation becomes something that you don't want to repeat. He spoke of a time a couple of years ago when a friend did this to him. Jess had this fantastic show on Lifetime called "Crime Stories". He told the story of how this relationship with his friend began. The story went, "One night after a long day at work, he was watching the show when it started to rain. Just as the rain was starting to turn into a downpour, a motorist ran a red light and plowed into another car, pushing it into a telephone pole. Jess was so engrossed in the story that he barely had time to warn his friend, until he saw the other car coming straight for them." The other car plowed into them and was so damaged that it had to be towed away. As you can imagine, the person who caused the accident was arrested and prosecuted. Then, a few months later, the person who lost their job through no fault of their own came to Jess and apologized. "I have a friend who is upset that we never talked to them about the accident. I want to make it right." Jess said, "I'm not that kind of preacher. I can't change the past. But I can sure help you to have a different conversation."
