Some patients have persistent chemotherapy-induced anemia (CIA) after hematopoietic SCT (HSCT) for hematologic malignancies. These patients are candidates for multiple transfusions and are potentially at a higher risk for infectious complications. Therefore, we examined the use of recombinant human granulocyte colony-stimulating factor (rhG-CSF) to prevent CIA and infection after HSCT. Fourteen patients with CIA underwent autologous HSCT. rhG-CSF was used to prevent CIA and, if necessary, to correct the anemia. In addition, we attempted to prevent infectious complications caused by neutropenia. All patients responded to rhG-CSF. The median numbers of total nucleated cells (TNCs) and hematopoietic progenitor cells (HPCs) infused were  $3.96 \times 10^8/\text{kg}$  (range, 0.93-12.86) and  $1.29 \times 10^6/\text{kg}$  (range, 0.46-7.81), respectively. A median of  $2.0 \times 10^8$  TNCs (range, 0.13-
