"The virus may be there and hiding."_ Q: Does TestFlight have any limit on submissions to application review? We're trying to submit an iOS app to the review queue, but the process is too slow. It's taking 15+ minutes to review. How long does it usually take? Does it mean we can send more than 10 apps every day? A: There is no limit, but the rate of submissions is capped at 4 per day, to help prevent excessive throttling.

See Apple's Developer Guide on App Store Connect for more information: An automated system analyzes application updates every day to ensure that you're not submitting an excessive number of updates. If you're about to reach or exceed the limit, you'll see an alert and you won't be able to submit any more updates until the following day. Additionally, there are two main factors that affect how quickly the review queue processes your updates. The review queue ranks updates based on the importance of the change, with updates containing a high level of change being assigned a lower priority. To increase your priority, include more information in your update, provide new functionality, or fix a significant issue. It's always a good idea to test your update before you release it. The review queue will likely pick up on a large
