I need to find out whether there is a more efficient way of doing this: SELECT key, value FROM stream where key = 'field1' || 'field2'; Instead of: SELECT key, value FROM stream where key = 'field1' && 'field2'; Does CQL support this type of comparison? A: No, CQL does not support string concatenation in an AND statement. In short, you can't use it like this: SELECT key, value FROM stream where key = 'field1' || 'field2'; but you can use it like this: SELECT key, value FROM stream where key = 'field1' || key = 'field2'; Note that it would be better to use $row['key'] in place of 'field1' || 'field2', because even if CQL doesn't support string concatenation, it will eventually support string concatenation. Q: How to make excel work from localhost on iOS? I am trying to build my first iOS app that opens excel and have a GUI to enter data. I am using pbxproject.
