Schneider, Steven Jay. فائل: portuguese. زبان: 2011. سال: Introduction and methodology of the study. First the questions were developed by a group of professors of different fields related to project management. A questionnaire was developed that was sent to all professors with whom the research team had had contact during the project. As a result, 16 professors of various fields in project management were interviewed. These professors were recruited based on their previous experience and their interest in the project. The interviews were held by phone, and they lasted between 20 and 50 minutes. These professors were not informed about the aim of the research beforehand. The study was approved by the Comissão de Ética para a Saúde of Universidade Estadual de Campinas (CAAE No. 0049.0.137.000-11) and the Research Ethics Committee (CAAE No. 22437413.7.0000.5427). An informed consent form was signed by all the interviewees. The fact that the information obtained would be presented as quotations does not involve a threat to the privacy of the interviewees. Each professor was interviewed in a separate room and had to answer the questions in private. The procedure for collecting the data was made in such a way as to ensure confidentiality. The interviews were tape-recorded. The criteria for data analysis were: readability, clarity, and usefulness for research. All the interviewees were interviewed twice, since the first interviews were considered to be exploratory in nature. This process was repeated until saturation was achieved, meaning that the interviews were no longer producing new information. It was also important that the interviewees' initial ideas were not influenced by the interviewer's questions. The respondents' instructions were followed and the questioning was directed towards the objectives of the study. The study was the first time that the 16 professors were asked to elaborate on their knowledge of project management and the link between project management and certain practices. The interviews were transcribed on paper. During the process of analysis, the authors made notes. The interviews were analyzed separately, and then the results were compared and contrasted to one another. It was not possible to verify the accuracy of the information provided by the interviewees due to the fact that the interviewees were not informed about the research until afterwards. The results were then organized in the form of a report that was written in such a way that it was understandable and clear to those who were reading it. ت ❖
