Mela Arts Festival is here. Complete with 100 free concerts, 500 artists, 20,000 participants, 20 stages, a state of the art multimedia theatre and a slew of fun activities. In the lead up to the festival, locals in Johannesburg have been doing anything to make sure their city is ready. I'll be at the Rekord, which is all about a South African hip hop DJ who actually managed to run away from the racist apartheid government. He can't be a hip hop legend if he can't take a few seconds to tell you a little bit about himself. I'm most excited about the now-traditional (and not) introspective fire dancing that takes place in the early evening hours, where a group of dancers mimic the flames of an open flame. It seems like I'm the only non-Zulu participant at the Rekord, which is as great as it is disappointing. My fellow Jazz on a Park participants are also doing their part, rehearsing and making sure
