disease.Q: Reading file in C++ and separating lines with comma I'm trying to read a file in C++, and I've searched online for ways to do this and I came across a website that has a method to do this. However, it only works for one variable, not for a number of variables. My code is: `#include` `using namespace std; int main() {`

ifstream fin; string line; int a, b, c;

What's New In?

Q: Regex to match all characters not in the following set I'm trying to match all letters but not the letters in this set: 0123456789 (A-Z) I've tried this: `^[^(A-Z)]+$`

but it doesn't match the full word (it misses the '0'). Anybody know of the easiest way to accomplish this? Thanks A: A-Z is just a character class, it includes all the characters in that range.  $^{\wedge}[\wedge(A-Z)]+$$  How will you handle the numbers? * * For the full copyright and license information, please view the
